

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Once again, I owe much to the patience of Ellen my wife, who has landed the thankless task of proof reading and editing, without which there would have been some doubt as to the satisfactory completion of the final manuscript. I owe considerable thanks to Tony Baron for reading the chapter on the Arctic, and Ian Taylor who made available his extensive card file index of Canadian map material, and gave me his enthusiastic support to finalise this project. Finally, I owe much to the patience of a large number of archivists and librarians who responded to both my written enquiries and finally my endless requests to view large and heavy atlas volumes.

Particularly, I would like to thank Pat McIntyre at the National Archives and all his staff for their enthusiastic and skillful help, as well as Joyce Banks and, more recently Peter Rochon for their help in locating items in the National Library. Pierre Lepine, despite a bout of flu, saved me innumerable hours in the Bibliothèque by his organisation and efficient anticipation of my material requirements. I owe Catherine Hofmann special thanks for her generous help in the Bibliothèque Nationale du France where she gave me full access to her extensive notes on 18th century atlas contents which she is preparing for her own publication.

The following Libraries & Institutions generously provided assistance throughout the research phases of this book: National Archives of Canada; National Library of Canada; McMaster University Library; McGill College Library; McCord Museum; Dalhousie University Library; Memorial University Library; Archives of Nova Scotia; Archives of Newfoundland; Library of Congress; W. L. Clements Library; Harvard University Library; Beinecke Library, Yale; John Carter Brown Library; New York Public Library; Boston Public Library; Wellesley College Library; Vassar College Library; Georgia University Library; British Library, London; the Bibliothèque Nationale du France; Utrecht University Library.