Winter 2007

Session Objectives

1. Scholarly vs. Non-scholarly sources
 - Some characteristics
2. Finding books and other sources
 - MORRIS
3. Finding articles (scholarly journals)
 - Databases for Peace studies, International relations
4. Evaluating Internet sources

Scholarly sources

- Some characteristics
 - Articles written by scholars/experts in a field of study
 - Audience includes professors, researchers, college and university students
 - Publishers are professional organizations, universities, research institutions, scholarly presses
 - Plain, black and white appearance; few ads
 - Always include footnotes and bibliographies that cite the author's research

Source: UBC Library

Non-Scholarly sources

- Some characteristics
 - Popular publications e.g. Magazines
 - Contain articles written by journalists (who may lack subject expertise)
 - Audience is the general public; articles more informal in tone and scope
 - Publishers are commercial, for-profit enterprises
 - Glossy, with pictures, photographs
 - Sources are rarely cited

Source: UBC Library

Non-Scholarly sources

- Could also include
 - media/internet sources
 - organizations including NGOs
 - interest groups
 - government publications

Session Objectives

1. Scholarly vs. Non-scholarly sources
 - Some characteristics
2. Finding books and other sources
 - MORRIS
3. Finding articles (scholarly journals)
 - Databases for Peace studies, International relations
4. Evaluating Internet sources

What is MORRIS anyway?

- MORRIS is McMaster's library catalogue
- Shows what the 4 libraries own
 - Books
 - Government Publications
 - Journals
 - Magazines
 - Maps, etc.
- MORRIS does not include records for individual chapters in books or individual articles

Searching MORRIS

- You can search many different ways
 - title
 - author
 - subject
 - keywords
 - and more!

Searching MORRIS by Title, Author

- Title
 - Best for when title is known
 - No need to use capitals, initial articles
e.g. The global Cold War; enter as global cold war
- Author
 - Use when author is known
 - Think about phonebooks (last name, first)!
e.g. Michael Hopkins; enter as hopkins michael

Searching MORRIS by Author

- Remember...an Author can also be a corporate body, government agency or department, organization (including NGO), etc.

e.g. Author united nations

Author Keyword(s) canada and foreign affairs

Author/Title Keyword(s) human rights watch and africa

Searching MORRIS by Subject

- Subject
 - determine the “correct” heading; MORRIS helps by providing “See” references and “Related headings”
e.g. Ethnic cleansing See: Genocide
- Great for browsing; related subjects are usually grouped together in MORRIS and on the shelves!
- Click on the Subjects to redirect your search and find related books on a topic

Searching MORRIS by Keyword(s)

- Five Keyword indexes
- Best when only have partial information
- Can limit search to specific parts
e.g. Title Keyword(s), Author/Title Keyword(s)
- Can create combinations of keywords or phrases
- Keyword(s) Anywhere – most powerful search with largest number of results (not necessarily all on your topic!)

Searching by topic: Tips & Tricks

- Break your topic into keywords or phrases (main ideas)
 - War against terrorism
- Combine keywords using 'and'
 - war and terrorism
- Think of synonyms
 - war or conflict
- Add synonyms using 'or'
- Use brackets around synonyms
 - (war or conflict)

Searching by topic: Tips & Tricks

- Use asterisk symbol * (truncation) to retrieve plurals and alternate endings e.g. terror retrieves
 - terror
 - terrorism
 - terrorist
 - terrorists

Searching by topic: Tips & Tricks

- Use quotations to search phrases
 - “ethnic cleansing”
 - “human rights”

Searching by topic: Tips & Tricks

- Scholarly books are concerned with academic study, especially research. They are often
 - edited (many articles and authors)
 - published by University presses
 - assigned the subjects collections or collected works
- Use the words collections, collected works, edited or editor in your search
e.g. Keyword(s) Anywhere genocide and edited

What does it all mean?

- MORRIS record includes
 - Author(s) or Editor(s)
 - Title (complete)
 - Publisher
 - Place of publication
 - Year of publication
 - Subjects

Session Objectives

1. Scholarly vs. Non-scholarly sources
 - Some characteristics
2. Finding books and other sources
 - MORRIS
3. Finding articles (scholarly journals)
 - Databases for Peace studies, International relations
4. Evaluating Internet sources

Articles defined

- Articles are published on an ongoing basis, in various sources such as:
 - newspapers (daily)
 - popular magazines (e.g. weekly)
 - journals (e.g. monthly, quarterly)
 - trade publications (e.g. weekly, bi-monthly)
 - online only

Journals defined

- Journals are often “academic” or “scholarly” because the articles within them are:
 - written by and for researchers/academics
 - usually intended for an academic audience
 - long, in-depth
 - not filled with advertisements
- Scholarly journals always include references or bibliographies

Peer-reviewed defined

- Many, but not all, scholarly journals are also “peer-reviewed” because the articles within them are evaluated and examined by experts in the same field of study before publication to ensure accuracy/credibility.

It is very reputable to have your article published in a peer-reviewed journal!

How do you find these scholarly sources?

- To find articles within scholarly journals, you should start searching in databases!
- McMaster Library subscribes to 400+ online databases, covering many disciplines

Title:

The governance of European security

Authors:

Webber, Mark; Croft, Stuart; Howorth, Jolyon; Terriff, Terry; Krahnmann, Elke

Abstract (English):

This article seeks to develop a concept of 'security governance' in the context of post-Cold War Europe. The validity of a governance approach lies in its ability to locate some of the distinctive ways in which European security has been coordinated, managed and regulated. Based on an examination of the way

Evaluating Internet sources

- Widener University
 - Evaluate Web Pages

The screenshot shows the Widener University website. At the top, there is a blue banner with the Widener University logo (a shield with '1821' inside) and the text 'Widener University' and 'Reach higher. Go farther. Choose'. Below this is a navigation bar with the text 'Home » Academics » Libraries » Wolfgram Memorial Library » Evaluate Web Pages'. On the left side, there is a sidebar with a 'up one level' link and a list of links: 'Wolfgram Memorial Library', 'Need Help?', 'Find Books', 'Find Articles', 'Find Journal Titles', 'Research by Subject Area', and 'Evaluate Web Pages' (which is highlighted in yellow). Below the sidebar is the 'McMaster University LIBRARIES' logo. The main content area features a photograph of students at computer workstations with the text 'Wolfgram Memorial Library' overlaid. Below the photograph is the heading 'Evaluate Web Pages' and a paragraph: 'The following tutorial and exercises will help you to evaluate the quality of information you find on the Web.' At the bottom of the main content area, there are two buttons: 'Evaluate Web Pages Tutorial' and 'Evaluate Web Pages Exercise'.

Evaluating Internet sources

- Five criteria commonly used to evaluate web sites
 - Accuracy
 - Authority
 - Objectivity
 - Currency
 - Coverage

Evaluating Internet sources

- ACCURACY
 - Are the sources cited/documentated?
 - Can you verify the legitimacy of the information and sources?
 - Who is the author? Does he/she have the credentials to publish on the topic?

Evaluating Internet sources

- AUTHORITY
 - Who is the author? Are there signs of self-publishing? Blogs? Wikis?
 - Known in the field?
 - Is there an “about” section that provides more info? (institutional affiliation, education, contact info, etc.)?
 - Who links to this site? (Check Google Advanced search to find out)
 - What is the domain?

Evaluating Internet sources

- OBJECTIVITY
 - What is the aim of the author in publishing the site?
 - What's the purpose of the site
 - To advertise a service or product?
 - Political?
 - Sway opinion?
 - Can you trust the author?

Evaluating Internet sources

- CURRENCY
 - What's the “last updated” date on the site?
 - Are the information and resources current?
 - Are there broken links?

Evaluating Internet sources

- COVERAGE
 - Is the content of the site explored in-depth?
 - Are there links to other sites of interest?
 - Beware personal biases!
